LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF THE WAR

Correspondence of the Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ireland, Jan. 18. — The Irish people have recently been aroused by the reports of gallant service by the Irish regiments. Just as the Sixteenth Division of the new army, "The Irish Brigade" that rallied upon the invitation of Mr. Stedmond from the Irish national volunteers, north and south, was preparing to go to the trenches, came stirring accounts of the deeds of the Tenth Division round Lake Dorian in Macedonia. The Tenth Division was the first purely Irish Division to take part in the war. It received its baptism of fire at Sulva Bay, and fresh from the ships was thrown against the entrenched positions on the Anafarta ridges. No official account of its valor in that desperate fight has yet appeared. But the unofficial accounts of the capture of Chocolate Hill and Dublin Hill by the Dublin Fusiliers and of the frontal attack by the Inniskillings on the Anafarta trenches, are among the most stirring chapters in Ireland's military annals. The Tenth Division represented Ireland, north and south, though drawn mainly from the south.

The general who organized it is an Irishman, General Sir Bryan Mahan, a first cousin of Sir Edward Carson. But close as the relationship of the soldier to the politician, the General's popularity is confined to no political party in Ireland. He is an Irishman first and last and all the time, and full of pride in his Irish regiments. For some reason yet unexplained he was not in command at Sulva Bay; but when the Saloniki expedition was decided upon he was given the command of the British forces, and among the first to land were the remnants of the gallant regiments that had fought around Sulva Bay.

To the gallantry of the Munster Fusiliers, the Dublin Fusiliers and the Connaught Rangers, the general ascribes the safe execution of the plan for the withdrawal to the Vardar. And the general's censors have also allowed the press correspondents to describe the work of the regiments. They state that but for the stand of the Tenth Division and fierceness of its counter-attacks with bayonets when there was no artillery to help them, the retreat of both the French and the British armies would have been cut off and the orderly withdrawal would have become a riot. Two companies of the Inniskillings posted on a bluff held up the Bulgarian advance for a considerable time, and stood their ground until they had fallen almost to a man.

This frank recognition of the valor of the regiments has had an excellent effect in Ireland. It was an auspicious coincidence that the news should have come as the Irish Volunteers Division was preparing to strike its tents. The division was recently reviewed by the Queen. One of the brigades is composed almost wholly of Nationalists from Belfast and Derry. The regiment contains some of the best fighting material in Ireland; and the Irish public have followed every step of its enrollment with unprecedented interest. Its new general, General Hickie, is a Tipperary man. Meantime the enrollment of the reserves for the various Irish brigades goes on. Fifty thousand men have been asked for within the year.

MONTANA UPHOLDS DECREES

The state supreme court of Montana recently upheld the divorce laws of the state of Nevada. The decision was the result of a bigamy charge being placed against a man who had secured a divorce in Nevada, and who had remarried and is a resident of Montana. It had been claimed that a divorce decree issued within this state was illegal in Montana. The state supreme court of the latter state dismissed the case, holding the Nevada law to be legal within the confines of Montana.

establishment of a creamery at the capital. The business men's association has taken the matter under consideration and action on the project will soon be taken. A special meeting of those interested in the movement has been called and suggestions by those interested in the movement requested.

THE LATEST GOSSIP IN SPORTING CIRCLES

(By Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18. — Notwithstanding the fact that the voters of California expressed their disapproval of professional boxing and voted it out of existence at a recent election, the professional four round promoters are disregarding the law and continue to stage the four round affairs just as of yore without any apparent disposition on the part of the authorities to interfere.

Out and out professionals such as Willie Meehan, Willie Hoppe, Lee Johnson, Charlie Miller, Bob McAllister, Frankie Jones, and others have been seen in action at the regular weekly bouts which are staged every Friday night. If bona fide amateurs have boxed in shows at which these men have appeared, the Pacific association of the Amateur Athletic union has a big house cleaning on its hands and the inaction of this organization in regard to the matter has been the source of no little criticism.

It is the general opinion that in view of the favor with which boxing is held by a large number of ring enthusiasts, the authorities are allowing it to proceed as long as the public is willing to allow it to continue.

In the face of the unprecedented popularity of the American collegiate game of football during the past season all over the country, according to the statistics compiled by such nationally known experts and authorities as Parke H. Davis and Walter Camp, followers of the game here were surprised at the opinions of the members of the Stanford alumni committee to the effect that it was their unanimous belief that ultimately, rugby and association football will be the only styles played in America.

This unofficial committee, composed of six alumni, acting at the invitation of the student body, drew up a report of the conditions under which peace might be acceptable to both Stanford and the University of California. The comment referred to was included in this report.

A ten years trial has been given the rugby game on the Pacific coast and, with the exception of Stanford and the University of Santa Clara, all the large institutions of learning, and a majority of the preparatory schools, have returned to the American code. The Stanford clubs of Los Angeles and Portland recently practically unanimously voted resolutions for the abandonment of rugby in favor of the American game.

The Olympic club of San Francisco definitely has decided to send its unlimited basketball team, which won the championship of the United States during the exposition tournament last year, to defend its honors at whatever eastern point may later be decided on for the holding of the titular event.

The team has been practicing regularly for the last two months and is said to have rounded into a form which shows more speed and accuracy than that shown when the premier honors were gained. Officials of the club declared that it is the strongest aggregation of players that ever has represented the "Winged O" organization. Every member of the last year's team is playing again, while several strength of the combination. Confidence is expressed by the club membership that the local clubmen will repeat their victory.
